ABOUT SANDY

S. Ciaramitaro (Sandy) holds a Master of Arts degree from the University of Detroit Mercy and has taught morality, ethics, and social justice courses at a private high school in Michigan. In addition to her teaching career, she has taught, developed, and implemented programs and curricula that are focused on helping children realize the importance of living altruistic lives centered on love. The Good Eggs series is her contribution to supporting children as they learn about virtues, diversity, and service – essential concepts to integrate into their lives as they grow into Good Eggs!

S. Ciaramitaro is also the Founder and President of The Good Eggs Foundation, which is dedicated to helping children in need. The Foundation's outreach can take many forms, including monetary assistance, educational resources, and basic needs. Part of the net proceeds from book purchases go directly to the Foundation. Improving quality of life at a local, state, national, and even a global level is key to helping others grow and succeed!

WHY BOOK SANDY?

Sandy will captivate your audience with heartwarming, sincere stories of how one can help others in need, no matter how much they have to offer. While Sandy routinely delivers custom content, her most popular topics include:

- Learn the importance of living an altruistic life centered on love.
- What is The Good Eggs Foundation and how this NGO advocates and raises funds to support monetary assistance, educational resources, and basic needs of children and families by connecting organizations and programs that benefit children with those in need.
- The Good Eggs book series: a contribution to supporting children as they learn about virtues, diversity, and service – essential concepts to integrate into their lives.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

1. You have been helping raise awareness and funds to make children's lives all around Detroit a little bit better. When did you first start working with children? Was there a spark or a specific situation that made you create and start The Good Eggs Foundation?
2. What type of support do you offer? Do you help kids from a specific age range?
3. What is the criteria to select a program, organization or family to get EGGED?
4. What was the last EGGED organization that you supported? What type of project was it?
5. What do I do if I want to suggest an organization to get EGGED?
6. How can someone help? Do you accept donations and volunteers?
7. You hold a Master of Arts degree from the University of Detroit Mercy and has taught morality, ethics, and social justice courses at a private high school in Michigan. How do you balance your time between your daily life with the TGE Organization?
8. In addition to your teaching career, you have taught, developed, and implemented programs and curricula that are focused on helping children realize the importance of living altruistic lives centered on love. The Good Eggs series is your contribution to supporting children as they learn about virtues, diversity, and service – essential concepts to integrate into their lives as they grow into Good Eggs! Can you tell us more about the book series?
9. What is your biggest wish with these books? Where can people buy them? *** (here you direct the audience to the amazon page)
10. What's next? What are your plans for the next 5-10 years with The Good Eggs Foundation and how can I learn more about it?

KIND WORDS

"We bought the first book for my daughter, and she absolutely LOVED it! This is the 1st book she has ever read all of! She couldn't put it down. I would like to order the other two."

~ Heather Jones Phleeger

"My class & I enjoyed reading The Good Eggs: Book 1-Virtues. My students always remind me on the first of the month to read the latest with the Eggs! The children of the story have become part of our family & the children make connections to the Eggs' experiences throughout the book (ex. divorce, being kind, having someone be mean to you). At first most of the students didn't understand how the names were selected (ex. Megg, Ms. Poach), but it was a quick teachable moment."

~ Ms. Marissa Terry, 3rd Grade Teacher

"This book is packed with life-lessons for children (and adults!). While reading it I imagined myself as an Egg in Albumen. I found myself identifying with each of the Egg characters in the book - even Benedict! As a teacher, I can see how this book can be used as a great tool for character education in the classroom. As a parent, I can also see how this book could spark some terrific conversations at home. I highly recommend it!"

~ Reviewer

"This is a cute little chapter book that encompasses 12 different character traits. The characters are eggs, and all have names with "egg" in them (Greggory) except for Benedict, the character who needs to learn each new character trait in every chapter. This is a book that I will be sharing with my students. It also comes with a teacher resource book to provide more discussion and lessons for the character traits.

The book has the characters starting back to school in September and learning about Understanding. It then goes month by month and the characters learn about each different character trait. The book is written in such a way that Elementary students will enjoy the characters and the situations they are in and the lessons they learn. Teachers will recognize Benedict! :)"
